Ajlun:

Ajlun Castle was built in 1184 AD to control the iron mines of Ajlun and to act as a fortress to counter the Crusaders. It is a fine example of Islamic architecture.

Jerash:

The ancient city of Jerash boasts an unbroken chain of human occupation dating back more than 6 500 years. The city's gold age came under Roman Rule and the site is generally acknowledged to be one of the best preserved Roman provincial towns in the world. Hidden in the sand before being excavated and restored over the past 70 years Jerash reveals a fine example of the grand, formal, Roman urbanism that is found throughout the Middle East. The major buildings at the site are the Temple of Hercules, a Byzantine church, and the Umayyad Palace.

The Jordan Folklore Museum is located within the western section of the Roman Theatre in Amman. This museum was founded by the Department of Antiquities and officially opened in 1975. The museum houses items representing the following Jordanian cultures: The culture of the desert (Bedu), the culture of the villages (Reef) & the culture of the towns and cities (Madineh).

The collection of the museum represents items of daily life from the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, such as: Costumes of the various areas in Jordan & Utensils used for food preparation, making bread, coffee, and tea.

The mosaic was constructed around AD 560 and once contained more than 2 million pieces - only about 1/3 of it survived.

Mt Nebo:

Mount Nebo, where it is believed that Moses died. It is here where Moses stood on the windswept summit of Mount Nebo and viewed the Promised Land of Canaan after having been told by God "you shall not cross over there". On a clear day one can see the panorama Moses must have seen: The Dead Sea, The Jordan River Valley and even Jericho, Bethlehem and the hills of Jerusalem.

Kerak:

An ancient Crusader stronghold, Kerak sits 900 meters above sea level and lies inside the wall of the old city. Kerak Castle is a dark maze of stone-vaulted halls and endless passageways. The castle is an impressive insight into the architectural military genius of the Crusaders.
